

TITANIC REQUIEM
HEARD IN SENATE

Senator Smith Delivers Eloquent Speech in Presenting His Report

ON GREAT DISASTER AT SEA

Praise for Heroism and Sentimental Speech—No Criticism is Made of Director J. Bruce Ismay.

United Press Telegram. WASHINGTON, D. C., May 24.—(Reuter)—In eloquent and convincing praise for heroism and sentiment, but for negligence and cowardice of the most appalling nature, tragedy of history, was the final and official requiem today in the Senate for the victims of the Titanic. Senator Smith, of Michigan, chairman of the Senate Investigation Committee summed up his views of the evidence developed.

That every soul aboard the giant liner might have been saved but for the indifference in attention and almost criminal neglect of Captain Stanley Lord and the other officers of the Cunarder, was the most startling charge Smith bitterly made.

"Needless sacrifice," at least 1,000 lives because the "strangely insufficient number of life boats were not filled" was also charged.

"Obsolete and antiquated shipping laws" and "laxity" of regulation and hasty inspection" the British Board of Trade were denounced by Smith. As a contributory cause he named the indifference of Captain Smith of the Titanic, for ignoring ice warnings and forcing the Titanic full speed through the northern waters. That Captain Smith had explained his offense by a heroic death was Smith's tribute to the dead commander.

Lack of discipline among the crew, and cowardice of some of its members indicated after the crash, was scathingly咒罵ed. To the two Titanic wireless operators, Phillips and Bride, the speaker paid a glowing tribute. He lauded Captain Roscoe of the rescue ship Carpathia.

Not a word of criticism for J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the steamship company was uttered by the Michigan Senator, but he caustically criticized the White Star line for its action in withholding news of the disaster, received, he said, 15 hours before it was reluctantly disclosed.

In eloquent terms the chairman depicted the folly of sending out the greatest ship afloat without sufficient tests, a steaming crew and no drills or discipline. The Titanic, he said, was following the proper course, although one known to be dangerous, at that speed but the speed was gradually and continually increased until the maximum of the death blow.

"Robots for those half-filled life-boats who 'stood by' and refused able to struggle, drowning swimmers until 'all the noise had ceased' was voiced.

"Upon that broken bulk," the senator concluded, "new vows were taken, new faiths expressed, old love renewed, and those who had been devoted in life were proudly and defiantly to the last pilgrimage together. In such heritage we must feel ourselves more intimately related to the sea than ever before, and henceforth it will send back to us on its rising, the cheerful salutations from those we have lost."

Replete with dramatic incidents, pathetic details and a gloomy realization of the facts that affected to the depths a world of grief, the official story of the Titanic disaster was told today to the Senate when the investigating committee filed its formal report. 1,517 lives were sacrificed to the loss of the Grand Banks on the night of April 14 and how but 705 souls were saved was told. The principal findings are:

That the Titanic was rushing at a speed of 21½ miles an hour when it crashed into an iceberg.

That of the 2,227 persons aboard only 524 men were saved.

That all might have been saved but for the negligence of the steamship California, which ignored the Titanic's distress signals.

That those rescued comprised 60 per cent of the first class passengers, 41 per cent of the second class, 21 per cent of the third class and 21 per cent of the crew.

That four warnings of ice ahead were issued by the Titanic's officers.

That the Titanic struck at 10:13 P. M. on Sunday, April 14, and sank at 12:47 New York time on April 15.

That eight vessels were near the Titanic and only the Carpathia gave assistance.

That there was no panic but a "short" crew poorly drilled and poorly commanded and only partially informed on life boats.

That the news of the disaster was suppressed by the White Star line officials and that misleading messages were sent to surviving relatives.

That Captain Ismay of the Carpathia withheld important wireless messages and sold it for "blood money" in New York.

With these minute facts clearly shown the committee recommended increased life saving equipment for all vessels, a requirement for wireless telegraph equipment, restrictions in mailing vessels, searchlights and revolution in ship construction.

A gold medal and the thanks of Congress carrying with it the privilege of the floor of the Senate and the House of Representatives at all times was ordered by the Senate as a fitting recognition on the part of the nation of the bravery of Captain Rostron of the Carpathia.

Senator Smith introduced a measure which condemned the Committee in glowing terms for the rescue of the 706 survivors of the Titanic. It was authorized to have struck and presented to Rostron a medal containing $1,000 worth of gold. The resolution passed unanimously.

CLASS DAY DRAWS
LARGE AUDIENCE

Interesting Program Presented at Carnegie Free Library Hall.

IS ENTIRELY CLASS TALENT

Hall Decorated in School and Class Colors and Class Orchestra Furnishes the Music—Participants Respond to Appropriate "Tousle" Program.

New features were introduced at the annual Class Day exercises of the Seniors held last evening in the Carnegie Free Library auditorium. The affair was in the form of an Alumni banquet. In 1937 and if the career of many of the Seniors is as brilliant as foretold last evening Connellsville will have many reasons to be proud of the Seniors of 1912. The affair was perfect in all its appointments and the only thing lacking to complete a regular banquet was the feast. Despite the several other attractions last evening the spacious auditorium was filled with friends of the class.

The exercises were out of the ordinary Class Day exercises and were highly enjoyed. The large stage was attractive in the class colors, blue and gold. Between the two large branches of laurel in the rear of the stage was a large class banner in blue and gold. The class of the stage was one long table around which were seated members of the class. The other members of the class at the banquet were seated around smaller tables. A red and white color scheme was carried out in a most effective manner. Silver candelabra adorned with dainty red and white shades and bouquets of red roses and white pomanders were used in decorating.

Along the front of the stage was a row of tall forms. Strung from one end of the stage to the other were Japanese lanterns. A festive scene was presented. The young ladies in the class looked charming.

All who participated in the program were members of the class. This was not often occur. Paul Wolf was introduced. Miss Adele May Hammon responded with a few pleasant reminiscences of the Class of 1912. Milton Bishop gave a toast to the girls of 1912, while Martha McMains toasted the boys of 1912. The class melody followed and was one of the hits of the evening. It is composed of about eighteen verses.

"Good Old High School Days" by Miss Julia Zimmerman was well received. Walter Detwiler introduced the celebrities of the class, who responded with two beautiful selections. The Entomological Club, wide range and the manner in which she rendered her two selections last evening proved her musical ability to the large audience.

The next celebrities introduced were William Rogers and Tweed Stafford. Several sketches of the latter were displayed while in the presence of the audience. William Rogers sketched members of the High School faculty and his class mates.

The work of both young men was clever. Misses Gertrude Semper and Margaret Lyon, pianists, followed with a piano duet, which was beautifully rendered.

The class poem by Shirley Silverman took up the next period. The exercises came to a close with the class song rendered by the entire class.

The annual class play will be held this evening in the Solson theatre.

SUPERINTENDENT FINCH GIVEN ROUSING SENDOFF

Employees of Colonial No. 3 Present Testimonial to Esteem Prior to His Transfer.

John Quincy Finch, Superintendent at the Colonial No. 3 plant of the H. C. Frick Coke Company at Smock, tendered a "send-off" by the employees Monday evening in anticipation of his transfer to the Buckeye and Southwest No. 2 mines of the same company, near Mt. Pleasant. Mt. Finch has been in charge of Colonial No. 3 for a number of years, and his transfer is a merited promotion.

The affair, like all well regulated affairs of this kind are expected to be, was kept from knowledge of the visitors until the psychological moment, which in this instance came shortly after dark, when the entire population of the plant and some from the outside took possession of the Superintendent's house and proceeded to get up.

The first number on the program was the presentation of a testimonial from the men in the shape of a solid silver coffee and tea set. Elmer L. Wolff, known as the silver-tongued machinist of Smock, did the honors, while Superintendent Finch, who is not silver-tongued, was at the receiving end and responded as well as the circumstances would permit.

The serious part of the performance being out of the way, the visitors proceeded to enjoy themselves, which they did until a late hour. Refreshments in profusion were served and when it came time to go home everybody was sorry and glad. Mr. Finch goes to his new assignment June 1st.

THE DOCTOR'S WIFE

Agrees With Him About Food.

A trained nurse says: "I have found so many infants in favor of Grape-Nuts food that I reluctantly recommend it to all my patients."

"It is delicate and pleasing to the palate (an essential in food for the sick) and can be adapted to all ages, being softened with milk or cream for babies or the aged when deficiency of teeth renders mastication impossible. For fever patients or those on liquid diet I find Grape-Nuts and albumin water very nourishing and refreshing. This receipt is my own idea and is made as follows: Soak a teaspoonful of Grape-Nuts in a glass of water for an hour, strain and serve with the strained white of an egg and a good dash of cream or flavoring. This affords a great deal of nourishment that even the weakest patient can assimilate without any distress."

"My husband is a physician and he uses Grape-Nuts himself and orders it many times for his patients."

"Personally I regard a dish of grape-nuts with fresh or stewed fruit as the ideal breakfast for anyone—well or sick." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

In any case of stomach trouble, nervous prostration or brain fog, a 10 days trial of Grape-Nuts will work wonders toward nourishing and rebuilding, and in this way ending the trouble. "There's a reason and it's prove."

NEW PROCESS GAS
RANGES SAVE
ONE-THIRD IN GAS.
Sold on 30 Days Free Trial

The New Process gas ranges have many improved features that are of great importance.

First—Economy.—Made on the "Visible" principle, they consume one-third less gas than other ranges, and the distribution of the heat in the oven being instantaneous, it is not necessary to heat the oven before using. Put your baking in the cold oven and light your burner. This saves from five to ten minutes time, saves gas, and greatly facilitates the baking.

Second—Visibility.—The glass window in the door, or "Visible" feature, makes it possible to regulate the fire without stooping or opening any doors, which is necessary on other ranges. The fire is in plain sight at all times.

The Uniform Primary in Court.

In passing upon the complaint of General Willis J. Mulligan, that he was defrauded out of the Republican nomination for Congress in his district by his opponent, Peter M. Shear, who falsified the votes of a large number of rural or complaisant Democrats, Judge Criswell of Venango county says that the intent and presumption of the Uniform Primary law is that such voter will ask for the ballot of his own party. The only protection given by law against practices such as General Hullings complaints of is the opportunity at the polls of challenging such votes. Once they are deposited in the ballot box without question, they may not be inquired into further.

This is one of the weak points in the Uniform Primary law. The act should impress upon the election officers the duty of challenging the voter if the board of any of them have any reason to think such voter is asking for the ballot of any party save that with which he is identified; and it should be further provided that any voter attempting to vote for other than his proper primary ballot shall be punished for doing so. Under the old primary system such offenders were punished by representatives of the party at the polls, and such punishments were summary; but now that the State has taken the management of the primaries out of the hands of the political parties, it is the duty of the State to provide proper punishment for offenders against the law. The voters of one party should never be permitted to influence or control the primary nominations of another.

We are told that the Preference Primary has come to stay and it is useless to struggle against it. The Courier is perfectly willing to permit the widest latitude to primaries in the honest ascertaining of party preferences, but it is unadvisable to permit primaries which permit one party through its ordering-vote to nominate the candidates of another party which makes manipulations possible through the simple manipulation known as multiplying candidates, or which invite and encourage the corruption of the voter.

We do not have to go outside of Fayette county for illustrations of these methods. We have had some judicial primaries wherein the Democratic vote got lost in the Republican shuffle, and vice versa. In these instances there were evidences not only of party complicity, but also of venality in epidemic form. In the older days of Fayette county politics, the Democrats nominated by popular party vote, but the multiplicity of candidates frequently resulted in the ticket before the choice of a minority and a majority on the same. The Republicans used the delegate system and that was unsatisfactory because of alleged base influences. The party finally compromised on the election of delegates on a preference ticket. The candidate for county office receiving the highest number of votes in the district was held to have first instructions; the second highest, second instructions, and the delegates were bound to vote their best instructions as long as there seemed any reasonable hope of the nomination of that candidate; thereafter, their second instructions, and finally, they were released from any obligation and were free to vote as they thought best for the party. This was the most satisfactory primary system any party ever had in Fayette county. It continued in force until supplanted by the Uniform Primary.

The political parties might with propriety and perhaps with profit be trusted to conduct their own primaries in their own way, subject to the laws and penalties now provided for corrupting the ballot, including the requirements as to filing, personal and party expense accounting, and making any wilful attempts at fraud under the party rules crimes against the election law, punishment to be impartially meted out to principals and accessories.

Hard's Bottom is in court again. It's no wonder Colonel Washington Hard is a convert to Segalism. His ancestral estates are never free from the encroachments of railroad monopoly. Segal's Pittsburgh took over him at all angles and never let him go. It is to be noted that S. P. paid the price with a staggering frequency that must be highly gratifying, but the fact does not detract the Courier from denouncing the gross that lays the golden eggs.

A woman has invented an 18-inch collapsible umbrella. It's still too long to wear in the stocking.

The Narrows Hill is no place for runaway horses, or for any other performances requiring more than passing traffic room. It is a question whether the demands of ordinary safety do not require the township authority to protect the road at this point by stout fencing or compel the owners of the abutting land to do so.

The Brownsville people are being subjected to vexatious days in getting their free ride, but Connellsville, the pioneer in the free bridge movement, struggled through the last breaking years for her freedom from tolls. Brownsville will get quick relief compared with Connellsville's experience.

There seems to be a surplus of those undesirable items who would rather rob than work, in spite of the fact that work is plenty and wages liberal.

More little Connellsville will observe Memorial Day by locking up. If everybody else does as well, there will be no complaints from those who think this day should be set apart for certain sober and patriotic purposes.

Snake stories are in order, but the West Virginia farmer who keeps a 15-foot pet blacksnake in his barn as a rattle, probably has the prize cinched.

The Latrobe Bulletin claims for Latrobe the honor of being the Gateway to the Connellsville coal region, an honor hitherto enjoyed exclusively by Greensburg, whose newspapers will probably dispute the Latrobe claim.

It is probable most have wrecks, it is probably better to leave them in their own back yards and buy nothing but freight cars; but it is better not to have them at all, and with proper precautions many of them might be avoided.

The street sprinkler is out for the summer.

The Greenwood sewer case should be defended by the borough, and if the courts decide that the sewer system is not public the borough should buy it and make it free. There should be no private sewers in Connellsville. That was the promise when sewer bonds were issued.

Company D will be allowed to spend the Fourth at home, but they will be obliged to leave the same night for camp duty, which will be a glorious extension of the national holiday.

This week is big with local events. It's Commencement Week. It includes Memorial Day and it has already marked an important Italian holiday. A lot of excitement can be done up in a weekly bundle.

THE CAVE MAN
By Isaacs of Yukon.

The cave man was thirty-five years old when he saw his shadow reflected in the rainbow. When he saw his picture for the first time he wished that the rainbow would freeze solid so that in the act to come his shadow could see what he looked like when he first wore a union suit of underclothing and a feather in his hat.

But the rainbow went by like an elation and after it was faded out in the sky he was satisfied that it did not freeze into an iceberg.

On the quiet, the cave man wanted his picture to freeze in the rainbow in order that he could have free and easy advertising when he ran for office. He knew that if he could keep his picture in the sky it would be water on his head when he started an elation and after it was faded out in the sky he was satisfied that it did not freeze into an iceberg.

On the quiet, the cave man wanted his picture to freeze in the rainbow in order that he could have free and easy advertising when he ran for office. He knew that if he could keep his picture in the sky it would be water on his head when he started an elation and after it was faded out in the sky he was satisfied that it did not freeze into an iceberg.

The cave man did not wish to wait sixteen years for an accident to happen him, so he ditched off from politics and rented part of a cave dweller's blacksmith shop to start and run a newspaper. He had written two and a half columns of poems for the "Cave Lumber Almanac" and thought that any one who possessed that amount of original steam could run a newspaper.

The morning before all the cave dwellers were out of their dens, he pitched the "Morning Wrinkles" into a small compact with a commissioner of the Monongahela county to swipe the commissionership of the Monongahela county printing and much follow.

The cave man did not wish to wait sixteen years for an accident to happen him, so he ditched off from politics and rented part of a cave dweller's blacksmith shop to start and run a newspaper.

The sun god before whom both cave men bowed the knee would not have things run that way in the blacksmith shop. He pulled the damper on them and smoked them out. The smoke was too strong for them to endure.

As they walked away from the sun god temple, they said: "Too bad that we didn't get the margin."

S. E. WADSWORTH DIES FROM EFFECTS OF INJURY

Veteran Railroad and Coke Man, Hurt Six Years Ago, Victim of Blood Poison.

Stephen Edward Wadsworth, one of the best known men in the Connellsville coke region, died yesterday in his farm along the Morgantown road near Uniontown. Death was caused by gangrene, which developed from an injury sustained six years ago, and diabetes. Mr. Wadsworth walked to a pump in his stocking feet one day about six years ago. He made a misstep and fractured his toe, although not learning that it had been broken until sometime later. About six weeks ago the old sore became troublesome and gangrene set in. This coupled with diabetes, was the end.

Mr. Wadsworth was born in Ohio in 1848. He served through the Civil War, participating in several battles. He rose to the rank of first sergeant and was honorably discharged at the close of the War. He learned the midget trade but after three years became a locomotive engineer.

In 1877 Mr. Wadsworth went to Pittsburgh and became an engineer on the Pennsylvania railroad. He was for several years engineer on the Uniontown express. In 1885 he resigned to become superintendent for the Brownfield coke plant of J. M. Schoenmaker. When this plant was purchased by the H. C. Pugh Coke Company in 1890 he remained in charge. In 1892 he retired to his farm for a rest but a year later became coal and coke inspector for the Pugh company, the position he held for five years. He became interested in the Pugh coke works for two years but 10 years ago retired to his beautiful farm along the Morgantown road. Mr. Wadsworth was twice married.

DOG CRUSADE

Will Soon Be Well Under Way in This State.

Each tax collector and constable in Pennsylvania has been furnished with a copy of the State law which requires either the licensing or killing of all dogs and an effort is now being made by the State Livestock Sanitary Board to have that law rigidly enforced. That board requires the county commissioners to furnish the names of the constables and tax collectors in their respective counties and then the requirements of the law were sent to each official.

It is understood that war will soon be declared on worthless dogs throughout Fayette County and that all county tax collectors and tax assessors lineage the will be killed. Should the owner of a dog fail to pay his taxes and have his dog taxed within 10 days after receiving a notice to do so the animal will be killed by the constable.

All notices warning dog owners to either have their dogs licensed or kill them will be sent by the tax collector who will receive 25 cents for each notice. That amount is to be paid by the county commissioners. The tax collector can be fined $2 for each instance where he fails to comply with the law.

Dogs found not wearing collars and tags will be declared public nuisances and will be shot by the constable of the district in which the dogs live. For each dog killed, buried, cremated or otherwise legally disposed of the constable will receive $1 from the county commissioners, taken from the fund realized from the taxation of dogs.

For failure to perform his official duty constables are liable to a fine of $2 in each case. That amount to be deducted by the county commissioners on the settlement between the constables and the commissioners.

BRADLEY IS NOT GUILTY, JURYMEN IN CASE DECIDE

Attache of Diamond Hospital for Insane Did Not Intentionally Kill John W. Siller, Old Inmate.

After a trial fitting all day, Johnstone Bradley, an inmate at Diamond Hospital for Insane, was found not guilty on a charge of homicide growing out of the death of John W. Siller, 60 years old, of Connellsville, who was a patient in the hospital several years. Siller was injured March 23, when the defendant was charged with pushing him to force him to walk faster. Siller died March 25.

The evidence tended to show that the deceased had been a troublesome patient, and that when Bradley urged him to walk faster in line with other inmates on the way from the dining room of the hospital Siller turned and struck Bradley in the face. Bradley testified he pushed Siller away and that Siller fell on his face.

THE WRECK OF THE TITAN

by MORGAN ROBERTSON

CHAPTER III.
Mother and Child.

DEATHLY his wet bands on his trousers, Rowland lifted his tot and said tenderly, "Well, little one, you must run back to mamma. You're the bird company." The innocent eyes glistened with tears, and then—a foolish proceeding, which only bachelors are guilty of—he held her above the rail in jesting mien: "Shall I drop you over to the fishes, baby?" he asked, while his features softened into an unavowable smile. The child gave a little scream of fright and at that instant a young woman appeared around the corner. She sprang toward Rowland like a thress, snatched the child from him for a moment with dilated eyes and then disappeared, leaving him limp and nerveless, breathing hard.

"It is her child," he groaned. "That was the mother look. She is married, married." He resumed his work with a face as near the color of the paint he was scrubbing as the tanned skin of a sailor may become.

Ten minutes later the captain in his office was listening to a complaint from a very excited man and woman. "And you say, colonel," said the captain, "that this man Rowland is an old enemy?"

"He is—or was once—a rejected admirer of Mrs. Selfridge. That is all I know of him, except that he has hinted at revenge. My wife is certain of what she saw, and I think the man should be confined."

"Why, captain," said the woman resentfully as she hugged her child, "you should have seen him! He was just about to drop Myra over as I seized her, and he had such a frightened look on his face too. Oh, it was hideous! I shall not sleep another wink in this ship, I know."

"I beg you will give yourself no unkindness, madam," said the captain gravely. "I have already learned something of his antecedents—that he is a disgraced and broken down naval officer. But as he has sailed three voyages with us I had credited his willingness to work before the mast to his craving for liquor, which he could not satisfy without money. However, as you think, he may be following you. Was he able to learn of your movements—that you were to take passage in this ship?"

"Why not?" exclaimed the husband. "He must know some of Mrs. Selfridge's friends."

"Yes, yes," she said eagerly. "I have heard him spoken of several times."

"Then it is clear," said the captain. "If you will agree, madam, to testify against him in the English courts I will immediately put him in irons for attempted murder."

"Oh, do, captain!" she exclaimed. "I cannot feel safe while he is at liberty. Of course I will testify."

"Whatever you do, captain," said the husband savagely, "rest assured that I shall put a bullet through his head if he meddles with me or my wife. Then you can put me in irons."

"I will see that he is attended to, colonel," replied the captain as he bowed them out of his office.

But as a master charge is not always the best way to discredit a man and as the captain did not believe that the man who had defiled him would murder a child and as the charge would be difficult to prove in any case and would cause him much trouble and annoyance, he did not order the arrest of John Rowland, but merely directed that for the time he should be kept at work by day in the tween deck out of sight of the passengers.

Rowland, surprised at his sudden transfer from the disagreeable scrubbing to a "sailor's job" of painting life buoys in the warm tween deck, was shrewd enough to know that he was being closely watched by the boatswain that morning, but not shrewd enough to affect any symptoms of intoxication or drugging, which might have satisfied his anxious superiors and brought him more whisky.

As a result of his brighter eyes and steadier voice—due to the exciting sea air—when he turned out for the first dog watch on deck at 4 o'clock the captain and boatswain held an interview in the chart room, in which the former said: "Do not be alarmed. It is not poison. It is halfway into the horrors now, and this will merely bring them on. We will see snakes, ghosts, goblins, shipwrecks, fire and all sorts of things. It works in two or three hours. Just drop it into his drinking pot while the port forecastle is empty."

There was a fight in the port forecastle, to which Rowland balanced at supper time, which need not be described beyond mention of the fact that Rowland, who was not a participant, had his pot of tea dashed from his hand before he had taken three swallows. He procured a fresh supply and dashed his supper, then, taking no part in the fight and guarded discussion of collisions, rolled into his bunk and smoked until eight bells, when he turned out with the rest.

"Rowland," said the big boatswain as the watch mustered on deck, "take the starboard bridge lookout."

"It is not my reck, boatswain," said Rowland in surprise.

"Orders from the bridge. Get up there."

Rowland grumbled, as sailors may when aggrieved, and obeyed. The man he relieved reported his name and disappeared. The first officer sauntered down the bridge, uttered the official "Keep a good lookout" and retreated to his post; then the silence and loneliness of a night watch at sea, intensified by the never ceasing hum of the engines and relieved only by the sounds of distant music and laughter from the theater descended on the forward part of the ship, for the fresh westerly wind coming with the gale made nearly a calm on her deck, and the dense fog, though overshadowing the

by a bright star speckled sky, was so shilly that the last tumultuous passenger had fled to the light and life within.

When three bells—6:30—had sounded and Rowland had given in his turn the required call, "All's well!" the first officer had left his post and approached him.

"Rowland," he said as he drew near, "I bear you've walked the quarter-deck."

"I cannot imagine how you learned it, sir," replied Rowland. "I am not in the habit of referring to it."

"You told the captain. I suppose the curriculum is complete at Annapolis as at the Royal Naval college. What do you think of Maury's theories of currents?"

"They seem plausible," said Rowland, unconsciously dropping the "sir," "but I think that in most particular this has been proved wrong."

"Yes, I think so myself. Did you ever follow up another idea of his—that of locating the position of ice in fog by the rate of decrease in temperature as approached?"

The sight he saw would have been horrid to a healthy mind, but it only moved this man to increased and uncontrollable merriment. The two rails below leading to the stem had arisen before him in a shadowy triangle, and within it were the deck fittings he had mentioned. The windlass had become a thing of horror, black and forbidding. The two end barrels were the boisterous, lightless eyes of a nondescript monster, for which the cable chains had multiplied themselves into innumerable legs and tentacles. And this thing was crawling around within the triangle. The anchor davits were many headed serpents which danced on their tails, and the anchors themselves writhed and squirmed in the shape of imagined hairy centaurs, white faces appeared on the two white lantern towers, grinning and leering at him. With his hands on the bridge rail and tears streaming down his face, he laughed at the strange sight, but did not speak, and the three, who had quietly approached, drew back to await, while below on the promenade deck the little white figure, as though attracted by his laughter, turned into the stairway leading to the upper deck.

The phantasmagoria faded to a blank wall of gray fog, and Rowland found sanity to mirth. "They've drugged me," but in an instant he stood in the darkness of a garden, one that he had known. In the distance were the lights of a house, and close to him was a young girl, who turned from him and fled, even as he called to her.

By a supreme effort of will he brought himself back to the present, to the bridge he stood upon and to his duty. "Why must I count me through the years," he groaned, "drunk then, drunk since? She could have saved me, but she chose to damn me." He strode to pace up and down, but staggered and clung to the rail, while the three watchers approached again, and the little white figure below climbed the upper bridge steps.

Danny Hart Goes to Third and Couple

Errors Enable Opponents to Win.

The Cokers dropped their second straight game to Alliance yesterday, the score being 16 to 6. Although Alliance made but 15 hits to the Cokers' 11, the great difference in the score was due largely to the fact that the Twins know something about baseball and can get away with errors that do not cost a pile of scores.

Alliance scored eight runs in the first inning, which settled the game.
Manager Wilson made another shift.
He sent Hart to third base and worked Trenton and Ritter in the outfield.
Leed and Hart were the hitting stars.
Sheets succeeded Howser in the box and got a two base hit. Five stolen bases were made off Foster, largely due to the fact that Gelske and Phelan haven't learned how to properly cover throws. Hart had three steals, which was the sum total of Coker baserunning, as the score would indicate.
